before Monday 13th November 2006

About the event

Opportunities to share stories from different cultural and spiritual perspectives that help us overcome the barriers that segregate people who we support.

What do you get?

Participants will develop an understanding of how to challenge assumptions, both from an individual perspective and your organisation's perspective, hear practical examples and experiences of people from different backgrounds, beginning to think about making creative steps to future outcomes. This course is for family members, self advocates and professionals.

About the trainers

Nabela Rahim is a consultant with NWTDT. Nabela has had various experience practising all person centred planning tools, promoting the rights of inclusion, particularly with people from other communities and is an active member of the Ethnicity Task Group as part of the Valuing People Regional Agenda. Nabela has also developed graphic facilitation training which she presents on various courses including family leadership programmes such as Partners in Policymaking™.

Pauline Doyle is a consultant with NWTDT. Pauline has a particular interest in Person Centred Planning, its development, especially with aspects of implementation. Although she is a training consultant, she is also Practice Development Manager for a north west agency. Pauline has spent the past four years developing Action Learning Sets for staff with regard to developing Person Centred Approaches. Pauline has worked extensively over the past 18 years with people who use services, both in learning disabilities and mental health services. Pauline trained as a qualified social worker and systemic practitioner and is based in Merseyside.
